"Why, with Finnegan up, it was 40 to 1 against him; with Garrison up, it was 12 to 1. See, Onajob! I knew the Snapper was to ride, the ring didn't. A hundred on at 40 to 1 wasn't bad, Onajob?"

"Wish I'd a been on with you, sir. Didn't know nothin' of the-" "The what? Oh, I guess there was nothing wrong. Onajob. Certainly there was nothing wrong, as far as I know. Only an error of the bookmakers. They got the wrong jock, that was all. But Onajob, I've been thinking that we might profit by what we have seen the last week—profit by the experience of others. Of course I can confide in you. We've known each

"Thank you, Mr. Ringhitter, it 'd come in mighty tail:

The sequel to the foregoing romance may never appear. It certainly will not if Mr. Dwyer and Colonel Simmons take warning in time,

That the passion for betting or speculation is so dominant among racing men as to overshadow every other instinct of humanity is a fact pretty well established by long experience. Of all the thousand anecdotes, tragic or humorous, which are on record concerning this peculiar phase of our common nature, none perhaps is funnier than the one rightly or wrongly attributed to a well-known English tragedian since deceased. The actor in question was at one period of his career playing a three-night starring engagement at the pretty little town of Bury, St. Edmunds, situated within a very few miles of New-For the third night, Saturday, the play was Richard III." and the theatre was as usual on Saturday. packed with an audience of trainers, jockeys and stable boys from the neighboring Newmarket stables. Nine or ten of this representative and extremely beauties of Shakespeare, and, of course, in the dark as to the almost unbeaten record of England's royal cutthroat. The choice and seemingly endless variety of murder and other horror was sufficient to keep them in a perfect fever of interest and expectancy, the decisive manner in which Richard disposed, one after another, of his opponents, creating a profound

Everything went merrily until the meeting between Richard and Richmond, when the master passion asserted itself and the boys began betting like fury on the result of the fight. Richard, on the ground of his previous public form, was at once installed a screaming favorite. Offers to back him were shouted from every part of the house and speculation ruled

And now (in the pit) there arose a boy from "Tom" Jennings's stable. "Tom" Jennings's boy had once received a volume of the Bard, as a birthday present, and knew what was meant to win. With memories of Paul Cray and Phenix in his mind, he saw his way to "getting a bit," and, standing on his seat, launched out with, "Two to one the field and take your choice!" The words had scarcely left his mouth when a hundred hands were stretched forth and "Tom" Jennings's boy was quickly surrounded by a crowd that poured in from every direction, overwhelming him with silver offerings or bathing him in a shower of gold pieces from the boxes.

All through the Battle of Bosworth, the betting went on, "Tom" Jennings's boy gradually extending the odis against the favorite—three, four, and five to one—until the two combatants rushed on the stage. At the start Richard, as usual, went out with a big lead, forcing the running at a cracking pace. Cries of, "He'll never catch him-Richard wins in a walk!" colled through the house. When Richard was forced down on one knee the audience groaned, but the groan was changed to a cheer as he fought his way his feet again, and astacked his adversary with fresh energy. The cheers were again and again renewed, until just as the glee was at its height Richard began to falter and then slowly but surely drop back.

Spin on, spin on, he isn't trying a yard!" was the yell from the thousand throats in pit and gallery, while hoots, cat calls, orange peel, nuts and applewere showered on the disgraced favorite, lying prone on his back with the point of the outsider's sword pinned auginst his breast. Richmond's concluding speech was drowned amid cries of "Foul! foul! Warn

"Tom" Jennings's boy then walked serenely home, with pockets full of gold and silver, rejoteing in the blessings of a superior education. The tragedian afterward declared that he was never so strongly tempted to alter the whole face of English history and give the boys a win for their money, there is significance in this advance taken in connection with the prominence given to Burlington and Northern's action during the week. Exceptionally the Northern Pacifics were weak; first, because of the disappointment of miscellaneous holders that the closing of the books occurred without a sharp demand for the cash stock, but principally because Mr. Villard, in issuing a plan for the disposal of the new $1.60,000,000 of bonds (the issue of which is practically assured) only forty-eight hours before the meeting of the directors, made a grave error, and the immaterial changing of that plan by the directors farnished opportunity for unfavorable but illogical comment. The plan of refunding being secured, its minor details are of little consequence, but of more importance to the stockbeing secured, its minor details are of little consequence, but of more importance to the stock-holders are the company's carnings, which for the second wock in September were $118,000 greater than in the same week in 1888, and for the period from January 1 to September 14, this year, have been $2,600,000 greater than in the same time of last year. With no special interest in the Street engaged in supporting prices, the failure of these repeated Western efforts materially to reduce values is simple cumulative evidence of what we so often have repeated, namely, that the bulk of stocks is not held by Wall Street commission houses for account of speculators, either large or small, and that the principal business done and the fluctuations made are in and for contracts which have their origin in and for contracts which have their origin in nort sules. Following is our usual table, giving the number of skares sold of all stocks, the highest, lowest, and final prices of the week Jogether with the final prices of a week ago, prefixed by the average prices of September 22, 1888.

THE PETROLEUM MARKET.

NEWS FROM THE FIELD AND RANGE OF PRICES

There has been no material change in the position of crude petroleum in the week just passed. Speculation has languished on the borders of stagnation, and the refined market has exhibited no special activity. In the Pennsylvania fields there is more interesting news from the ventures at Jefferson Centre, in Butler County, but on the other hand the advices from Europe are still confirmatory of the shrinkage in the Baku pool of our Russian competitor. "The London Green recently published a report from the British acting vice-consul at Batoum, in which he says: "The price of kerosene at Batoum has lately risen twenty-five per cent, and still has an upward tendency, while the price of crude petroleum at the wells near Baku has per cent, and still has an upward tendency, while the price of crude petroleum at the wells near Baku has at the same time advanced 100 per cent. This is solely due to the fact that the demand, both for home and foreign consumption, during the year is estimated as near as possible at 3.255,806 tons, whereas the total output of the Baku wells will, it is stated, fall short of these figures, and the maximum quantity of crude oil that they will be able to yield is set down at only 1,612,903 tons. Unless, therefore, new sources are discovered, a cessation of the supply of petroleum from Baku may be expected within a short time. The foregoing was written under date of July 20, and on August 3 the British Consul at Odessa, Russia, writing further on the subject, says: "Futle efforts have recently been made to strike oil. In consequence of the state of affairs prices remain firm, and a docline during the present season is not expected."

The "gushers" opened at Jefferson Centre in the last week or ten days have been a welcome check to the declining tendency of the Pennsylvania supply. That pool has reached a daily production of about 3,000 barrels, and some good "strikes are expected this week. The pool is the seat of declined activity with the drill, and yet it has been so full of surprises that it is not likely that its limits will be defined before the winter. At saxonburg there have been some developments which hold out the hope of an increasin supply, and at Brush Creek the drill is being fairly well rewarded. And yet all these operations in the oil country full as yet to bring the daily output within close distance of the demand. At the present rate of excess of deliveries over runs the net stocks promise a decline of 700,000 or 800,000 barrels this month make the daily average of runs 51,864 barrels in September, 1886; 7a,820 barrels in September, 1886; 62,964 in 1887 and 70,620 barrels in September, 1886; 62,964 in 1887 and 70,620 barrels in September, 1886; for September, 1886; for September, 1886; for Septem

Saturday's wheat market was remarable for nothing but its exceeding duiness. Professional traders had the day to themselves and even their operations were on a decidedly limited scale, not more than 600,000 bushels changing hands. No new influences were developed to vary the situation and the fluctuations in prices at no time exceeded 1-8a3-8 cent. Foreign cable advices were dull and if anything a shade easier. October opened at 841-2 to 845-8 and De-cember at 863-4 cents, Friday's closing prices. Then came a slight advance followed by a decline of 7-8 cent, leaving off generally steady. Net losses were recorded of 1-8 cent on September at 841-8, and May at 913-8; November made a gain of 1-8 cent at 853-4 cents, while October, December and January closed unchanged at 841-2, 863-4 and 878-4 cents, re-

Chicago, Sept. 22 (Special).-Hutchinson, although had pretty nearly everybody against him yesterday, sephad pretty nearly everybody against him yesterday, succeeded in closing wheat at an advence. It was compared with Friday, a small day in the wheat pit. It was Saturday, and everybody helped to keep the range narrow. The result was that wheat did not get outside of a break spread. December opened at 75°s x75°s, sold between 75°s x79°s, and 80°x50°s cents and closed at 80 cents. Cora was weak for a while to-day on fine weather and the bit movement. May, which opened at 33°s cents, sold to 33°s, but closed at 33°s 23°s. The receipts were 605 cars; the esthmates for Monday, 753. The packers and the product, but they did not dare to follow their inclinations. Hutchinson and the other close houses stood the product, but they did not dare to follow their inclina-tions: Hutchinson and the other clique houses stood ready to take all the October pork offered. October opened at $19.75 and closed at $11. January opened at $9.12 and closed at $9.12@$0.15. Lard and ribs were almost without any fluctuation. On the curb December wheat sold at $0 cents.
